“ I had the privilege of meeting John and Emma in 1979. I was staying in Annapolis for a USNA homecoming weekend at what I believe was their Son's home. One of her granddaughters was there that weekend as well. When they learned of my adventures in trying to get from Baltimore to Annapolis via a local bus, they insisted on driving me back from Annapolis to Baltimore. Unfortunately the train was cancelled due to electrical issues. They then kindly took me to their home to spend the night. The next morning, John drove Emma and other family members to work, and then took me to the train station. Truly wonderful people that I remember fondly 40 years later!!

I think of this story now and then, but passed by Baltimore on Sunday and I had to research and found this.

Blessings to Emma and John. Angels then. Angels now.

Not sure if this can be passed along to the family after so many years but wanted to write down this memory.
