“ One of my earliest memories of mom was sitting on her lap at the piano. She had a love a music that she passed down to her kids and now grandkids and even great-grandkids. She had a song for everything. We didn't have technology on long car rides, so we sang. She taught us how to harmonize and I'm grateful that I know songs that have since faded from history. I have a playlist on my phone of songs that remind me of her. My brother told me that mom was the first one to bring a Beatles record into the house. It doesn't surprise me.
