“ J. Woodford Howard made a lasting impression on my life and subsequent career in the Law. In the Fall of 1959 he was my Constitutional Law professor at Lafayette College. This may have been his first college post after having received his PhD. He was even as a young man a brilliant teacher. I recall him emphasizing the great importance of civil rights as just not a legal but also a moral issue. He was my faculty advisor and gave me as a young college student very sage advice. His knowledge as well as wisdom and compassion will never be forgotten. We spoke a few years ago on the telephone in a very enjoyable conversation, and coincidentally I was just today sending him an email message - that got bounced back. RIP Professor Howard.
