“Tonight I was reading Henri Nouwen. It prompted me to recall two important life conversations with Fr. John Haughey. One was on a bus in Spain as seatmates in the early 2000s. We discussed the nature of vocation. The other a few years later was about his new work on a theology of the Holy Spirit. Despite being in his 80s, he was still thinking and writing theologically. Because of him, I know of Lonergan. I missed his death a couple years ago. But discovering it tonight, I thank God for his faithful life and contributions. Shirley Roels

“I am sad to learn of John's death. Like me, a Philadelphian who lived a few years in Charlotte, NC, we had many friends in common. I met him while teaching at Georgetown's Walsh School, and he was generous and helpful to a 56-year-old rookie Georgetown prof.

“I was sad to hear of his passing when I went to the Jesuit Residence at Georgetown University tonight. He and I had lunch together years ago, long before I was Catholic, to discuss a book he was working on. Fr. Haughey was a great conversationalist and just such an urbane, interesting person. And of course, one of his books, "Where is Knowing Going," published by a friend, was a staple of our "Faith and Intellectual Life" reading group. Praying for him and his family.

“ Father John Haughey was kind enough to come to our parish to officiate at the baptism of our 5th child. During the party after, he came to the room where I was dressing the baby. During our conversation he gave me some faith confirming and supportive wisdom. Over the last 52 years I have had the opportunity to pass those comments forward many times. I was grateful for his catholic perspective and thanked God that he shared his faith with me.

My sympathy and prayers are with his wonderful family.

Sincerely

“ Fr. John touched so many lives here in Charlotte, NC, where he was the first Jesuit pastor in 1987. He personally touched our lives and we will always picture him, blue eyes twinkling, throwing his head back in laughter and always disliking the dog in the Ben Long fresco! With sad hearts but happy he is in the loving hands of our Heavenly Father.
