“ As the matriarch of a large Catholic family, Miss Helen surely had no shortage of knuckleheads pass through her home on Greenhill Avenue. Beginning in the mid 70's, I was blessed to be one of those knuckleheads. I quickly came to realize she was a beautiful soul.

Every time I saw her she wore a brilliant smile. She was always genuinely interested in what was going on in my life and had a way of letting me know that she believed in great things for me, even if I wasn't seeing those things in myself. I suspect she was that way with everyone.

She was an endless font of kindness. She put a statue of the Blessed Mother in her window on my wedding day to ensure we had nice weather. She graciously chatted with me when I was helping a young politician meet people in the neighborhood, and even agreed to put his sign on her lawn. I suspect she did this more because she thought it would help me than him, although the fact that the politician was a handsome Irishman couldn't have hurt.

She was above all else a wonderful mother who wove a family out of the chaos of eight children in a tiny row house. (Nine if you count Mr. Joe, and stories like the great candlestick caper). She and her beloved husband built what is mankind's greatest and most enduring achievement, a loving family.

She has gone to be with her dear husband for eternity. I have no doubt that when Mr. Joe heard she was on her way, he woke up the echoes cheering her name.

My condolences to her family, especially her children who in some small way shared her with the rest of us.
