“ My condolences to the Beale family. I first met Mr. Beale in middle school when I would go over to Jeremy's house to hang out, watch tv, or play some video games. Mr. Beale would occasionally come up to where we were hanging out and tell us some funny or interesting facts about different topics such as musicians. I believe one day Jeremy and I were watching some garbage music video on MTV and Mr. Beale walked by shaking his head and said "You two need to be listening to some Santana!" Mr. Beale's musical taste definitely rubbed off seeing how all of his sons are very musically talented! In high school, when I had just started playing football, I really didn't know a whole lot about the sport. Us kids just all liked to play in the backyard. Mr. Beale lent me an old VHS tape about football that helped give me a better understanding about the structure of the game, and I remember us discussing a player who wouldn't use weights to work out and could do 1,000 pushups. Mr. Beale also helped me land my first official job working on the Ridgely Middle School field for LTRC. While I'm pretty sure I butchered one of the baseball fields with my terrible raking job (sorry Jeremy), Mr. Beale still gave me a pay day!

May he rest in peace! I will be thinking of you all!
